

"IF YOU DON'T UNDERSTAND THE LAW, HOW ARE YOU SUPPOSED TO COMPLY WITH IT?"

Fahri Azzat
Co-Founder,
Loyarburok.com

With over 13-years of experience as a lawyer, Fahri Azzat is one of the founding fathers of Loyarburok.com, easily Malaysia's most accessible law website advocates being critical in legal, political and various topics.

How did it all begin?

Loyarburok.com started out with just 6 people having similar interest and direction in terms of wanting to advocate for justice and being critical in advocating legal and political issues. Now there are about 300 of us and we've got our own centre for our volunteers and initiatives.

What makes Loyarburok such a hit?

Our theme is to be critical minded and to think. We're taking a more social approach these days, not that law is taking a back seat, but it doesn't completely define us anymore.

What are our biggest misconceptions about the law?

Firstly, lawyers are not as expensive and exorbitant as people think they are. Secondly, the law isn't really that difficult and a lot of it is common sense. Lawyers are supposed to make things very easy for you to understand. If you don't understand the law, how are you supposed to comply?
